Literary treasures defiled, improved

UNB English Department to mix lasers, zombies, and the 16th century

BY PATRICK IN DER LUFT The Dairy Creamer

Taking a cue from the movie industry, UNB's English department has decided to update various literary classics to make them more appealing to younger audiences.

"We were getting the impression that students found the class materials a litle boring," said department head Roger Plowed. "And who can blame them, right? I've honestly never been able to get past page three of Paradise Lost ... And don't even get me started on that Chaucer crap."

The first works scheduled to be revised, however, are those of playwright William Shakespeare.

"I recently saw a summary of the new MacBeth," said Plowed, hopping with excitement. "It's gonna be totally awesome! Macbeth himself is now an evil droid sent from the future by three evil alien witches."

Other significant changes involve the character of Banquo, who is murdered in a "way cool disemboweling." Also, he returns to MacBeth not as a ghost, but as a brain-craving zombie. Finally, the character of MacDuff will wield a lasersword to smite his opponents.

"The students will be down with that, I think," said Plowed. "Who doesn't like lasers? And zombies are the shit, too. They eat brains, for Christ's sake! That's hardcore!"

defending itself against you, this criticism is just allegations that there is nothing heroic about the Hockey Hero sandwich being sold in stores across the country.

"It all depends on how you want to define the term 'hero.' If you are referring to some kind of a Greek god or Tim Allen physique, then maybe the Big Mac is a better choice. However, here at McDonald's, we like to think Plowed went on to detail changes to other Shakespeare classics.

"Romeo & Juliet needed some serious re-working. All that star-crossed lovers crap is so 1590s... We're thinking of making Romeo Juliet's gay roommate, like on Will & Grace. The original end was also a total downer. I'm keeping my fingers crossed we can work more puppies into it," Plowed said, using one hand to cross all the fingers on his other.

Radical Gnarly Man not afraid of war

Superhero to keep doing lots of stuff

BY M.E. STINGKISH

The Dairy Creamer

Local superhero Radical Gnarly Man stated in a press release Thursday that he will continue to be radical and gnarly, despite the war in Iraq.

"There's no way that I'm going to let this little war stop my radical gnarliness," Radical Gnarly Man said. "I'm so radical that nothing can stop the gnar."

Radical Gnarly Man, who has been attributed wearing moccasins in the nude and also for hindering the diabolical plans of his stepmother, plans to be more radical than ever before. "I'm so gonna beat up kids who smoke pot and drink underage all the time. It'll be so totally a wesome." RGM said of his new plans. "I got GNARLY these new ninja ninja catalogue that are so rad." Radical Gnarly Man's most recent accomplishment, he explained, was the capturing of Fredericton's most infamous criminal, Not-So Radical Gnarly Man.

Not-So Radical Gnarly Man is know for his completely uncool wardrobe, along with his habits of mischievously studying biology, chemistry and on his spare time, mathematics.

"That guy was so not radical that he had to be put in jail forever," Radical Gnarly Man said on Thursday.

"Not-So Radical Gnarly Man is no longer a threat to Fredericton citizens thanks to the sustained efforts of Radical Gnarly Man," Cpl. Roger Hammond said at a press

Friendly fire not so friendly: soldiers

BY HARRY SCOTT The Dairy Creamer

Despite mainstream media reports, it turns out that so-called 'Friendly Fire' isn't friendly at all.

"The American soldiers said that they wanted to be our friends," explained Tommy Smith, a British Infantryman, "And then when our backs were turned, they started shooting at us! How is that friendly?"

Other British soldiers are reflecting that attitude, saying that they don't want to be friends with the Americans because if they get much friendlier, someone could end up dead.

"In England when you are friends with another man, you show it with hugs, and lots of them," added Tommy. "We're much more comfortable with hugs."

The confusion has even been echoed by other American soldiers who have been equally perplexed by their fellow countrymen's actions.

Phish fan won't admit Phish aren't always brilliant geniuses

Phish Phanatic

BY CHRIS WILSON-PHILLIPS The Dairy Creamer

First year UNB student Phil "The Hippy" Clarke can't admit when Phish performs poorly, say at least two of his friends.

"We all used to like Phish," said long-time friend and smoking buddy Jon LeBlanc. "And most of our group still does. But a lot of us have moved on, and actually started listening to other bands too."

LeBlanc said Clarke refuses to listen to anything else, and even when he does, he "irritates the hell out of everyone around him."

"He just goes on about how much better Phish is," said LeBlanc.

"Like last week, when we were all grooving to the sultry sounds of [local funk sensation] Fueberry Blunk. He just kept saying 'Ah they like, totally stole that riff from Phish. I can't believe that drummer's wearing a mumu. Yeah. real original.' He just wouldn't shut up."

LeBlanc said he noticed Clarke's problem after Phish's recent televised appearance on NBC's Saturday Night Live, when lead singer Trey Anastasio blatantly forgot a couple of lines.

"Phil tried to convince us that Trey did it on purpose, and that he purposefully messed up the lines to demonstrate the negative effects of 'corporatizing' the arts on network television."

"I mean, what the hell is `corporatization'? I swear us hippies get a way with a lot these days.'

Joe 'Stankypits' Rossdale, another of Clarke's friends, echoed LeBlanc's concerns:

"I mean, I like Phish a lot. Phil just doesn't understand that Phish, like any other band, is capable of screwing up.'

Rossdale said that Clarke once claimed that Phish even "breathes on a level which no other artist will ever rival.3 "And another thing," continued Rossdale. "He keeps going on about how cool this show called "SpongeBob Squarepants" is. Quite honestly, I don't think he's even seen the show. But I guess its 'cool' for pot-smokers to watch it. Or at least say they do.

Clarke said his plans for the summer include going to see as many Phish shows as possible, and "kicking some serious fooseball ass."

nor your average rapper. He claims to be more of a sentimental pimp, who is "poking fun at the state of hip-hop," but at the same time expresses his conscious side through the acronym 'Power Is Mindful Peace.

PIMP-T, or T-PMIP backwards, admits that criticism for his work has been anywhere from positive to negative, and even posinegative, which doesn't make any sense because it's not a word. He continued:

"This two sided approach used by PIMP-T has left more than one person murmuring 'split personality disorder.' Since August's lead guitarist Ethan Young-Lai had this to add, "a lot of people I talk to can't decide if he's a genius or a lunatic or mavbe both."

When asked why he was talking like a newspaper story, the rapper added:

"The Bruns is all over PIMP-T like he wasn't a giant knob. That paper needs a better screening process." An unnamed source at the Bruns replied:

"You can find him in da club," said SU President Kate Twitfiled.

PIMP-T is recognized East-Canada-wide for his high-intensity stage presence, but not much is known about his appearance, although recent eyewitness accounts describe him as "Vanilla Ice with a goatie."

Although not in possession of V-Ice's staple haircut, PIMP-T has been known to wear a wig and has dance moves akin to rap legend MC Hammer.

In a recent phone interview with the elusive rapper, PIMP- \hat{T} — ever referring to himself in the third person — had this to say:

"Admittedly, PIMP-T isn't your average pimp,

"I realize that there's probably not too much to do in Saskatchewan, but perhaps you would consider putting all of your irate energy about the album into improving your newspaper?"

And then The Sheaf replied, but not really, because I just made this up:

"Oh yeah well we're stupid and The Brunswickan is really smart, especially Chris Wilson-Smith, even though he isn't there anymore, and isn't that team leader of the safety patrol Chris's grandmother?"

Police are advising students to run to the nearest safety phone and call someone they trust if PIMP-T is sighted.

AIR FORCE ONES!

The lost Turd

By KRAM NOREMAC FRIDAY, APRIL 4

SCORPRICORNIUS (13/1-14/34): You don't exist, so stop trying to make me tell you the future. I don't believe in you. NOW GET OUT OF MY HEAD!! ARIES (3/21-4/19): You will travel to an exciting new land, filled with adventure and fun. To get there, you will rent a motorized unicycle.

TAURUS (4/20-5/20): You will vanish into thin air in late June. To find yourself again, try singing the alphabet backwards really fast.

GEMINI (5/21-6/21): This summer will be the greatest one this year. It will be packed with stories to tell next year, some of which are incriminating.

CANCER (6/22-7/22): You will enter into a time loop and relive the next four months over and over again. You've already read this, haven't you?

LEO (7/23-8/22): All your fantasies will come true this summer vacation, even the one about the sock puppet and the peanut butter.

VIRGO (8/23-9/22): You will try skydiving and fail, but don't worry, you'll get it the second time.

LIBRA (9/23-10/22): You will accidentally kill your twin and take over their life, pretending that to be them, and that you killed the other one out of selfdefense.

SCORPIO (10/23-11/21): You will awake with a third arm one night after too much drinking. At first you will be shocked, but you will grow to love it.

SAGITTARIUS (11/22-12/21): You will eat nothing but sandwiches all summer. Every kind will be different, and you will write a book about it. I envy you.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/19): Your favorite stuffed animal will go missing, but don't worry, as it travels of its own free will.

AQUARIUS (1/20-2/18): You will wake up inside a dumpster with nothing but one sock and a silly hat on. It's your brother's fault.

PISCES (2/19-3/20): Your snot is contagious, and a big mucus-filled epidemic will occur when you sneeze on the bus
